President Signs Housing Act Amendments

MEASURE DRAWN TO SPUR HOME BUILDING IS LAW

More Liberal Mortgage, Insurance Provisions Approved In Action

SEN. WAGNER IS BACKER

Construction Of Smaller Properties Urged

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(UP)—The White House today announced President Roosevelt has signed amendments to the Federal Housing act designed to spur a projected $2,000,000,000 building boom.

Mr. Roosevelt signed the housing amendments yesterday, the White House said, during a day spent in his White House quarters concentrating on business which has piled up on his desk during the last fortnight.

The housing amendments, sponsored by Sen. Robert F. Wagner, D. N. Y., were passed by the house and senate during the special session of congress last week. Due to differences between the two bodies, the measure was only finally approved in compromise this week.

The measure affords more liberal mortgage and insurance provisions than present F. H. A. requirements. As finally approved a provision that wages prevailing in communities where work was done under the bill should be paid on F. H. A. projects was removed after bitter senate debate. The provision was sponsored by Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, R. Mass., and supported by the American Federation of Labor.

The measure provides for F. H. A.-insured mortgages up to 90 percent of the cost of homes costing (Continued on Page Eight)

DEAN TO LEAVE HOSPITAL AFTER GAINING HEALTH

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 4—(UP)—The Rev. Israel H. Noe, who collapsed after a three weeks' fast, was regaining his strength rapidly today and planned to leave Baptist hospital within a few days.

Physicians reported that the suspended dean of the Cathedral of St. Mary was eating prescribed hospital meals, including meats and vegetables, and that his weight had increased from 100 to 132 pounds.

The dean was suspended by Bishop James Maxon, of the Episcopal diocese of Tennessee, after he insisted on fasting to demonstrate that he could exist on spiritual strength alone.

Called in Crisis

AN EVIDENT crisis in the German army draws the attention of the world. Fuehrer Adolf Hitler has been struggling to find a successor to War Minister Werner von Blomberg, evidently forced out by an opposite faction. Hitler called Gen. Walter von Reichenau, above, commander of the Seventh German army corps in Bavaria, to Berlin. Meanwhile, conflicting reports went the rounds as to the cause of von Blomberg's resignation. Some said it was his recent unpopular marriage to a girl of humble origin. These same people referred to Blomberg's quitting as another "Wallis Simpson" affair. Others said it went to the very roots of the long-smoldering relations between the army and the Nazi party.

BERLIN, Feb. 4—(UP)—News dealers reported that all newspapers coming from France were confiscated today, including the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune and that the Daily Telegraph and News Chronicle of London were confiscated also.

FOES OF NAVAL BILL TO APPEAR BEFORE SENATE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(UP)—The house naval affairs committee prepared today to hear opponents of President Roosevelt's 20 percent bigger navy program.

Chairman Carl Vinson, D. Ga., scheduled a peace organization witness to follow Admiral William D. Leahy. He announced that Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War would testify Monday. The council campaigned unsuccessfully to have the President invoke the neutrality act in the Japanese-Chinese conflict and is opposed to the proposed 47-fighting ship increase.

Simultaneously Rep. Melvin J. Hass, R., Minn., a member of the committee, advocated repeal of the neutrality act and enactment of a policy of vigorous defense as a complement to naval building plans.

"There is no question this program is justified," Haas said. "The question is whether it is big enough."

Leahy continues his testimony today.

STATE OFFICIAL DEFIES SENATE CRAFT PROBES

Contempt Citation Voted Against Glenn Horn, Purchasing Agent

ARREST TO BE ORDERED

Coal Contracts Without Bids Questioned

COLUMBUS, Feb. 4—(UP)—The state senate graft investigating committee today prepared contempt charges against State Purchasing Agent Glenn A. Horn, who refused to tell the committee why the state had purchased coal without competitive bidding.

Horn refused to answer questions without the advice of counsel, he said. His attorney, Clarence Addison, was ejected from the committee room yesterday when he interrupted the hearing and challenged the committee's right to question Horn about the legality of coal purchases.

Under a contempt resolution passed by the committee late yesterday, Chairman J. Ralph Seidner is required to issue a warrant for Horn's arrest and force him to appear before the bar of the senate on Feb. 8 to answer contempt charges.

Higher Prices Charged
The committee in the last two weeks has questioned witnesses who testified that the state, in some instances, paid twice as much for coal as the city of Cleveland.

During the morning session of yesterday's hearing, Horn answered questions readily despite the ejection of his attorney. After a one-hour recess, however, he announced that he would not answer further questions unless his attorney was permitted to advise him.

Horn admitted that bids on coal purchases had not been taken for three years. He said bids would be taken in the future.

He denied that the state "wasted" $165,000 on its coal purchases in 1937.

The committee continued its investigation of coal purchases today.

James Metzgerbaum, committee counsel, said "the issue is simply whether or not Horn has a right to refuse to testify simply because his attorney is not present."

The committee previously cited Finance Director Ray Allison for contempt because of his failure to produce expense vouchers requested by the investigators. Allison later turned over the vouchers.

MASKED BANDITS GET $2,000 FROM COLUMBUS BANK

COLUMBUS, Feb. 4—(UP)—Four men held up a branch of the Ohio National bank here today and escaped with $2,000.

The bandits were masked. They pointed guns at Curt Wilcox, manager of the branch, and five other employees and three customers while they took the money from the counters.

They escaped in a black Ford sedan, parked in front of the bank.

Three men held up the First Federal Savings & Loan Co., directly across the street from the Ohio National branch, last Wednesday. In that holdup, $2250 was taken.

One of the bandits was described as being six feet tall, weighing 180 pounds, and about 30 years old. He wore a dark suit and overcoat and a light hat. Another was short and wore overalls.

YOUTH ABOUT TO DIE GIVEN EAGLE SCOUT HONORS IN HOSPITAL

RAHWAY, N. J., Feb. 4 — (UP)—Wilfred Van Fleet, 15, clutched weakly today at a badge pinned to his breast. It was an Eagle Scout badge, the highest award in scouting.

Wilfred won it the day before he was stricken with an intestinal obstruction, and it was presented to him in Memorial hospital after he had undergone an emergency operation.

He smiled faintly during the ceremony. Physicians did not tell him that he probably will die.

Mrs. John Rowe, E. Franklin street, was admitted to Xenia hospital for treatment and Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Neuding, E. Main street, escaped with minor injuries Thursday when the auto in which they were riding and a truck collided in Xenia.

The injuries of Mrs. Rowe were reported not serious. She was expected to be removed home Friday afternoon.

The group was enroute to Dayton, where Mr. Neuding was to attend a trustees' meeting of the United Brethren publishing house. Mrs. Neuding expected to attend a meeting of the women's auxiliary of the Otterbein Home. Mrs. Rowe planned a visit with relatives.

The Neudings continued their trip to Dayton, Thursday. They expected to return to their home Friday.

J A P AIRPLANES BEGIN MASS RAID ON CANTON AREA

CANTON, China, Jan. 4—(UP)—(By telephone to Hong Kong)—Canton was gripped today by fears of a pro-Japanese uprising to coincide with a mass air raid on the city and an attempt by Japanese warships to penetrate a protective boom across the Canton River and the Bocca Tigris forts below the city.

Every precaution was taken against any attempt at disorder. Soldiers patrolled all streets. One foreign diplomat was stopped five times within 10 blocks and questioned each time by soldiers.

Rumors of every sort flashed through the city—the most tangible one that there had been an attempt to assassinate Mayor Chung Yuen-To. Shots were heard in the Tungshan district and a bullet penetrated the steel-shuttered window of a Japanese resident's home. It was generally believed that the shots were fired by men involved in a plot to rise against Canton authorities.

Information was most difficult to obtain because Chinese officials for the present had made themselves unapproachable.

An urgent air raid alarm was sounded at 1 a. m. But starting at 7 a. m. there was what seemed an endless series of alarms. Several groups of Japanese planes were sighted in the South and West suburbs and bomb detonations were so severe that they rocked gunboats in the river.

He resented a limitation on speeches by Roth. Shafer is shown being hustled out. He later came back to make a speech—but to an empty hall. Roth denied being "hand picked" and proceeded to bring order to the assembly.

Bids Being Opened For Sewage Plant Erection

Approximately 75 men, representing contractors, material and equipment firms were crowded into the council chamber Monday afternoon for the opening of bids for Circleville's municipal disposal plant.

Twelve bids were received. The deadline for contractors to submit bids was 12 o'clock noon. During the first hour of the afternoon session five bids had been read. Eighty-one items are listed on the bids, engineers said.

Tabulations were being kept by Floyd G. Browne, of Marion, engineer employed by the city on the disposal plant project, and J. M. Eakin, resident engineer inspector under P.W.A. for the plant construction. The bids were submitted to L. E. Miller, service director. Others assisting were W. B. Cady, mayor; Karl Herrmann, safety director; Carl C. Leist, solicitor, and Miss Lillian Young, auditor.

The city has issued $75,000 in bonds for the project, P.W.A. has allotted $61,363 and the Container Corporation, whose wastes will be treated in the municipal plant, has offered $15,000, if needed.

HARBAGE WARNS SOLONS AGAINST MILEAGE FUNDS

COLUMBUS, Feb. 4—(UP)—Members of the Ohio general assembly today were threatened with arrest if they attempt to collect mileage for sessions of the house and senate they do not actually attend.

In letters to Lieut. Gov. Paul P. Yoder and Speaker of the House Frank Uible, Arnett Harbage, West Jefferson, O., farmer, said he had been told certain members of the house and senate are "still collecting mileage for miles they have not traveled."

If vouchers are presented for collection on such mileage claims, Harbage said, "I shall swear out a warrant for the arrest of the persons responsible for that voucher for forgery and try and prosecute and convict him."

Harbage filed a taxpayer's suit more than a year ago which enjoining the auditor of state from paying similar mileage claims. Final disposition of this case is still in the courts.

BUSINESSMEN REPORT TO F. D.

Energetic Trust - Busting, Many Other Activities Asked By Committee

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(UP)—Representatives of the administration's small businessmen's conference will report to President Roosevelt today on a series of substantially anti-New Deal resolutions adopted in two uproarious sessions.

The businessmen—numbering up to 1,000—have scattered to their homes after discussing recession remedies. Behind them they left a committee of 11 men who spent last night compiling a report on proceedings which will be submitted to Mr. Roosevelt today.

Politicians got considerably more than a laugh from proceedings which undoubtedly had funny moments. One observer, jerking a thumb in the direction of Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, remarked: "Snow White and the 700 dwarfs."

News tickers kept the capital informed of progress in the big commerce department auditorium where small businessmen were meeting and word passed around offices and luncheon tables that: "They've called in the police now."

LONDON ORDERS DRIVE AGAINST 'PIRATE' CRAFT

25 Members Of Alcira's Crew Reach Safety Near Barcelona

COAL SHIPMENT LOST

Rebel Bombers Blamed For Morning Attack

LONDON, Feb. 4—(UP)—Great Britain decided today to take energetic measures to sink "pirate" submarines in the Mediterranean on sight and to shoot down airplanes that attack British ships.

The government was thoroughly aroused by the latest incident, the sinking of the British freighter Alcira by two airplanes from the Balearic islands.

BARCELONA, Feb. 4 — (UP)—It was asserted officially today that two seaplanes from the Nationalist base at Majorca island, in the Balearics, bombed and sank the British steamship Alcira 20 miles Southeast of Barcelona.

The attack was made at 6:45 a. m., it was said.

Members of the Alcira's crew, arriving here by rowboat, first reported the attack.

A fishing boat and a government launch saved the remainder of the 25 men of the Alcira's crew, it was said officially, and a British observer of the international Spanish non-intervention committee who was aboard.

(A Swedish agent of the non-intervention control was aboard the British steamship Endymion, sunk apparently by a submarine torpedo off Cartagena.—Ed.)

The official statement said that the seaplanes first dropped three bombs at the Alcira and then returned to attack with two more bombs.

The Alcira sank at once with the cargo of coal it was bringing from Great Britain, it was said.

A member of the Alcira's crew said:

"We were warned that planes were overhead but took no notice. We thought it was a joke. We heard machine gun fire and then we knew that something serious was happening."

"The planes first machine gunned us and then returned slowly (Continued on Page Eight)

PAUPER, 77, KILLS THREE INMATES OF INFIRMARY

TEWKSBURY, Mass., Feb. 4—(UP)—A 77-year-old inmate of the pauper ward of Tewksbury state infirmary slew three fellow inmates and wounded two others with a mail-order pistol early today "because they were mean to me."

All five men were shot in their beds. Some were asleep.

After the men were shot John Mack, a rangy giant 6 feet 3 inches tall and spry for his years, fled along the railroad tracks four miles to Lowell where he was captured.

He had discarded his six-shooter, with one undischarged cartridge, in flight and, unarmed, he surrendered without resistance to two officers who spotted him from a scout car.

"I was running away to Alaska to look for gold," Mack told Patrolmen Thomas Maguire and Thomas Hickey. He was dressed in blue denim work clothes such as he had worn on odd jobs in the gardens of the infirmary during the last six years.

The officers took him to Lowell police headquarters.

LONDON ORDERS DRIVE AGAINST 'PIRATE' CRAFT

25 Members Of Alcira's Crew Reach Safety Near Barcelona

COAL SHIPMENT LOST

Rebel Bombers Blamed For Morning Attack

LONDON, Feb. 4—(UP)—Great Britain decided today to take energetic measures to sink "pirate" submarines in the Mediterranean on sight and to shoot down airplanes that attack British ships.

The government was thoroughly aroused by the latest incident, the sinking of the British freighter Alcira by two airplanes from the Balearic islands.

BARCELONA, Feb. 4 — (UP)—It was asserted officially today that two seaplanes from the Nationalist base at Majorca island, in the Balearics, bombed and sank the British steamship Alcira 20 miles Southeast of Barcelona. The attack was made at 6:45 a. m., it was said.

Members of the Alcira's crew, arriving here by rowboat, first reported the attack.

A fishing boat and a government launch saved the remainder of the 25 men of the Alcira's crew. It was said officially, and a British observer of the international Spanish non-intervention committee who was aboard.

(A Swedish agent of the non-intervention control was aboard the British steamship Endymion, sunk apparently by a submarine torpedo off Cartagena.—Ed.)

The official statement said that the seaplanes first dropped three bombs at the Alcira and then returned to attack with two more bombs.

The Alcira sank at once with the cargo of coal it was bringing from Great Britain, it was said.

A member of the Alcira's crew said: "We were warned that planes were overhead but took no notice. We thought it was a joke. We heard machine gun fire and then we knew that something serious was happening."

"The planes first machine gunned us and then returned slow— (Continued on Page Eight)

PAUPER, 77, KILLS THREE INMATES OF INFIRMARY

TEWKSBURY, Mass., Feb. 4—(UP)—A 77-year-old inmate of the pauper ward of Tewksbury state infirmary slew three fellow inmates and wounded two others with a mail-order pistol early today "because they were mean to me."

All five men were shot in their beds. Some were asleep. After the men were shot John Mack, a rangy giant 6 feet 3 inches tall and spry for his years, fled along the railroad tracks four miles to Lowell where he was captured.

He had discarded his six-shooter, with one undischarged cartridge, in flight and, unarmed, he surrendered without resistance to two officers who spotted him from a scout car.

"I was running away to Alaska to look for gold," Mack told Patrolmen Thomas Maguire and Thomas Hickey. He was dressed in blue denim work clothes such as he had worn on odd jobs in the gardens of the infirmary during the last six years.

The officers took him to Lowell police headquarters.

NAVY'S INQUIRY BOARD STUDIES BOMBER CRASH

Officials Hope To Gain
Much Knowledge From West Coast Wreck

LIVES OF 11 CLAIMED

Each Of Planes Valued
At $250,000

SAN PEDRO, Calif., Feb. 4—(UP)—The navy's war games paused today while a board of inquiry attempted to retrieve some profitable information from Wednesday night's disaster—the collision of two bombing planes that cost 11 lives.

"Out of this regrettable and costly accident," Rear Admiral Charles A. Blakely said, "we may arrive at a new safety feature in aircraft maneuvers."

The two giant planes locked wings while being maneuvered into close formation during darkness and a squall, each of the three factors a peril. The cause of the crash was not given officially, but it was reported that a gust of wind had caused them to drift together. They locked, one plane burst into flames and both plunged down and sank in the ocean. Four men of one plane leaped out in parachutes and were picked up from the water. One of them died later of his injuries.

Moving in Darkness

The 98 warships and more than 300 planes, assembled off the coast for war games under realistic conditions, were maneuvering in darkness against a theoretical enemy invader. The bombers were scouting, and close formation, into which they were ordered, means approximately one plane width, 105 feet, apart. The stormy weather added to the hazards of attaining the solid phalanx in which the V-shaped squadrons travel.

Aboard one plane, Lieut. Carlton P. Hutchins, former naval academy football and lacrosse star, ordered his men to leap through a bomb rack opening when the crash occurred. Four of them escaped from the plane. J. H. Hester, radioman first class, one of the four picked up by the crew of a crashboat from the flagship Pennsylvania, died of his injuries yesterday. The other three survived.

Lieut. Hutchins was still at the controls the last time he was seen by the survivors. Two other members of his crew, William Woodruff and John G. M. Neidzwick, also were lost with the plane designated 11-P-3.

In the plane 11-P-4, Lieut. Elmer G. Cooper and his crew of six all died. They were Erwin Koch, aviation cadet, and the enlisted men: Maurice J. Fitzmaurice, George C. Griffith, Julian Rawls, Joseph Walton and William Landgrave.

Five Men Veterans

Five of those lost were veterans in the navy's Pacific flights and made a trip to Pearl Harbor, Honolulu, from California last April. The two-motored planes, 14-ton PBV models, were valued at $250,000 each.

The board of inquiry was headed by Commander Henry Mullinix, of the U. S. S. Wright, flagship of the aircraft scouting force. Admiral Blakely is commander of the scouting force aircraft.

Taffeta linings for springtime's wool coats are being used almost exclusively in the better coats.

Young French Actress Is Ill of Pneumonia

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 4—(UP)—Two physicians alternated today at the bedside of the girl with the trickiest name, the fiercest temper and the most unusual eccentricities in Hollywood—Simone Simon, seriously ill of bronchial pneumonia.

Before tonight they expected a crisis in the condition of the only actress ever to persuade a movie producer that she needed a panther for a pet.

Miss Simon, dimpled French star, collapsed last October on a 20th Century-Fox sound stage from bronchitis and was rushed to a hospital with a fever of 101. Ten days later she apparently had recovered fully.

Physicians reported today that her temperature was 103 degrees.

For the last three weeks, the 24-year-old girl who has provided Hollywood with more than her share of legends, has been working in "Josette," with a cold which became worse day by day. Wednesday night she went home to bed. Yesterday she felt so much worse that Drs. Max W. Bay and Harry H. Blond were summoned. They removed her to Cedars of Lebanon hospital in an ambulance.

Watch Maintained
Although gravely concerned over her condition, they indicated that her youth and vitality meant much in her favor. They maintained, nevertheless, a constant watch at her bedside.

Production of "Josette," which co-starred her with Don Ameche, was suspended. The picture virtually was completed, except for recording of Miss Simon's voice, advertised nationally on billboards, which say:

"Simone Simon Sings Sings." She pronounces her name "Sea Moan Sea Moan," while the studio advertising agents have christened her "La Sauvage Tendre."

Born in Marseilles, reared in the tropics of Madagascar, and starred on the European stage long before she was 20, Miss Simon still looks like a child in her teens, but when she gets angry, hardened movie producers run for cover.

When she arrived in 1935, after a movie scout in Paris had obtained her signature to a contract, Miss Simon astounded studio officials by announcing she was temperamental.

She also demanded a panther. She said she had two of them in Madagascar, and that she needed at least one to walk with her down Hollywood boulevard on shopping tours.

Instead of trying to argue with her, the studio said "yes ma'am, and what kind of a disposition do you want in your panther, and any particular color?"

That stopped Simone Simon. She wept and apologized.

Thereafter she worked hard, learning English and appearing in such films as "Girls Dormitory," "Ladies in Love," "Seventh Heaven," and "Love and Misses." At intervals she flew into tantrums. Consistently she refused to eat her luncheon in the studio restaurant, she demanded always that she be dressed in blue, and although the publicists reported at one time and another her engagement to almost every eligible young man on the lot, she has not had a love affair since she arrived in America.

LUTHERANS EAT, HEAR OF GROUND HOG AT MEETING

The ground hog day program in charge of R. L. Brehmer was opened with "History of Ground Hog Day" by Charles H. Weldinger, who substituted for Charles H. Mack. J. D. Hummel next took his turn at his fellows in his discourse on "Ground Hogs that I Have Known. Charles H. Walters had charge of the period devoted to current events and brought out many interesting thoughts on present day happenings. The discussion was entered into very freely by several other members of the brotherhood.

Frank H. Palm was "ground hog" song leader for the evening. The meeting of February 17 will be designated as "Public Health Program," with Dr. A. D. Blackburn of the county board of health giving the principal address.

CARTER EARLY STARTER

John Carter, young tenor, almost made his debut on the Don Ameche program ahead of schedule. He arrived in Hollywood on a Saturday afternoon. At midnight, producers of the show were notified that Nelson Eddy was ill with a cold and probably would not be able to go on the following night. Producers quickly called Carter and Robert Armbruster, the conductor, out of bed for a rehearsal. Carter, with Armbruster, at the piano, met at the NBC studios at 1 a. m. and rehearsed until 3 a. m. Next morning, however, Eddy was feeling better and physicians gave their consent to his scheduled radio appearance.

SONG GETS PREMIERE

"A Long Time Ago," the latest composition from the pen of Carrie Jacobs-Bond, will be given its world premiere during the "Vocal Varieties" program over WLW, 7:15 to 7:30 p. m., EST, Tuesday, Feb. 8.

Written in the last months of 1937, "A Long Time Ago" reflects the Bond characteristics which have made her love ballads famous throughout the world. Although in her seventies Carrie Jacobs-Bond has lost none of the sentiment that has characterized her songs such as "I Love You Truly," "Perfect Day," and "Just a Wearyin' For You."

William Stoess, conductor of the "Vocal Varieties" program, will present the vocal orchestra singing a capella in the latest Bond composition. In the unique group are the deVore sisters—Marjorie Ruth and Billie; the eight men, and the Smoothies—Babs, Charlie and Little.

CARTER EARLY STARTER
John Carter, young tenor, almost made his debut on the Don Ameche program ahead of schedule. He arrived in Hollywood on a Saturday afternoon. At midnight, producers of the show were notified that Nelson Eddy was ill with a cold and probably would not be able to go on the following night. Producers quickly called Carter and Robert Armbruster, the conductor, out of bed for a rehearsal. Carter, with Armbruster, at the piano, met at the NBC studios at 1 a. m. and rehearsed until 3 a. m. Next morning, however, Eddy was feeling better and physicians gave their consent to his scheduled radio appearance.

SONG GETS PREMIERE
"A Long Time Ago," the latest composition from the pen of Carrie Jacobs-Bond, will be given its world premiere during the "Vocal Varieties" program over WLW, 7:15 to 7:30 p. m., EST, Tuesday, Feb. 8.

Written in the last months of 1937, "A Long Time Ago" reflects the Bond characteristics which have made her love ballads famous throughout the world. Although in her seventies Carrie Jacobs-Bond has lost none of the sentiment that has characterized her songs such as "I Love You Truly," "Perfect Day," and "Just a Wearyin' For You."

William Stoess, conductor of the "Vocal Varieties" program, will present the vocal orchestra singing a capella in the latest Bond composition. In the unique group are the DeVore sisters—Marjorie Ruth and Billie; the eight men, and the Smoothies—Babs, Charlie and Little.

WELL, I'LL TELL YOU BY BOB BURNS

You hardly pick up a paper nowadays without readin' some solution on how to keep this county out of war. My idea would be to put war on strictly a business basis. If we see it ain't a good deal, jest don't go into it. Up to now, every war has cost us more lives and money than we started out to save in the first place.

It's kinda like my Uncle Pud's pants. He said the only way he could keep 'em from frayin' at the bottom was to cut 'em off at the knees.

John McGhee, who as a young man resided here in the Ashville community is county superintendent of schools at Bemidje (Indian name) Minnesota. He has had this position for some years and may be a candidate for the place again. It is an elective office. Many Indians are there and he has supervision of their schools. Some of the teaching staff are Indians. The Winters are of the real kind, the thermometer at times registering as low as 40 to 50 below zero.

Fox or No Fox

Do not know by whom, but a note was left for us at "headquarters" saying: "People never get too old to learn about new things. Since Mr. Bill Pettibone and Ray Kuhlwein know all about elephants and mice they had better study more about foxes, as it is positively known that a fox killed the chickens at the Lanman farm".

Forty-three chickens were killed, bitten through the neck. And the same night this wholesale killing took place, it is said a neighbor's pet fox, which had been kept chained, was loose. With all this convincing evidence, we'll guess it'll be a hard job to convince Bill and Ray that Mr. Fox is the guilty party. But "seeing is believing" they say, and the boys have learned something new.

Rockey With Jennings

Young Chester Rocky is in Christ hospital at Cincinnati recovering from an emergency operation for appendicitis. And in this hospital there is another Ashville boy, known here several years ago, as Bill Jennings. "Bill" is a surgeon now and one of the "coming ones" in that hospital. He is married and promises to come to Ashville, "the old home town," for a short visit next Summer when on his vacation.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Edward G. Robinson, who played the first gangster in motion pictures, now plays the last. He comes tonight and Saturday to the Cliftona Theatre in "The Last Gangster," a dramatic story of a man's term in a penitentiary, with James Stewart, Rose Stradner, glamorous new actress from Vienna, and a notable cast.

"The Last Gangster" tells of the imprisonment of a "public enemy" and the struggle of his wife, who did not know his calling, to lose her identity and save their child from the disgrace attached to his name.

Miss Stradner plays the wife and Stewart the newspaperman who befriends her and with whom she finally finds happiness. Edward Ludwig directed from a screen play by John Lee Martin.

JURORS CONVICT POLICEMEN FOR TAKING BRIBES

CLEVELAND, Feb. 4—(UP)—Convicted on three counts of having accepted bribes from reputed dealers in illicit liquor during the prohibition era, a police sergeant today made preparations through his counsel to file a motion for a new trial. Sentence was deferred pending the possible filing of the motions.

Sgt. James E. Price was found guilty of the charges by a jury in common pleas court here late yesterday, the fifth police officer convicted in a purge by Safety Director Eliot Ness.

Price's accusers were eight former illegal liquor dealers in the district. Price long served as a police liquor raider.

Since Mr. Bill Pettibone and Ray Kuhlwein know all about elephants and mice they had better study more about foxes, as it is positively known that a fox killed the chickens at the Lanman farm".

Forty-three chickens were killed, bitten through the neck. And the same night this wholesale killing took place, it is said a neighbor's pet fox, which had been kept chained, was loose. With all this convincing evidence, we'll guess it'll be a hard job to convince Bill and Ray that Mr. Fox is the guilty party. But "seeing is believing" they say, and the boys have learned something new.

Ashville Rocky With Jennings

Young Chester Rocky is in Christ hospital at Cincinnati recovering from an emergency operation for appendicitis. And in this hospital there is another Ashville boy, known here several years ago, as Bill Jennings. "Bill" is a surgeon now and one of the "coming ones" in that hospital. He is married and promises to come to Ashville, "the old home town," for a short visit next Summer when on his vacation.

Ashville Notes of Personal Interest

Mrs. Leroy Cromley was brought home from Mt. Carmel hospital Friday. Other than being tired she stood the trip fine. No news within the last few days has been received from Mrs. Amy Stoker, who is at Grant hospital. If she were not on the improve her friends here would know it. Clarence Kern went back to work at the Chittenden hotel, Columbus. Fred Curry is now at work installing his power block machinery. We have with us this Friday night the Monroe township high school basketball teams. The visitors have charge of the game. Having no auditorium of their own they are using ours. G. A. Hook and family had for recent visitors, Mrs. Gladys McNulty, Zanesville; Charles Balzer, Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Swingle and daughter Ellene, Roseville. Ernest Fellers who has been very much out of the going as a result of a hard fall recently received is gradually gaining and will be about again in a few days.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Edward G. Robinson, who played the first gangster in motion pictures, now plays the last. He comes tonight and Saturday to the Cliftona Theatre in "The Last Gangster," a dramatic story of a man's term in a penitentiary, with James Stewart, Rose Stradner, glamorous new actress from Vienna, and a notable cast. "The Last Gangster" tells of the imprisonment of a "public enemy" and the struggle of his wife, who did not know his calling, to lose her identity and save their child from the disgrace attached to his name.

Miss Stradner plays the wife and Stewart the newspaperman who befriends her and with whom she finally finds happiness. Edward Ludwig directed from a screen play by John Lee Martin.

AT THE GRAND

Katherine de Mille, Pauline Moore, Allan Lane, Keye Luke and C. Henry Gordon are in the cast supporting Warner Oland, again featured in the title role of "Charlie Chan at the Olympics," fourteenth in the Twentieth Century-Fox series, currently at the Grand theatre.

JURORS CONVICT POLICEMEN FOR TAKING BRIBES

CLEVELAND, Feb. 4.—(UP)—Convicted on three counts of having accepted bribes from reputed dealers in illicit liquor during the prohibition era, a police sergeant today made preparations through his counsel to file a motion for a new trial. Sentence was deferred pending the possible filing of the motions.

Sgt. James E. Price was found guilty of the charges by a jury in common pleas court here late yesterday, the fifth police officer convicted in a purge by Safety Director Eliot Ness.

Price's accusers were eight former illegal liquor dealers in the district. Price long served as a police liquor raider.

TO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

GENTLEMEN: Your organization is to be congratulated for the splendid annual meeting that was conducted this week. The meeting was a success from start to finish with the report of the secretary disclosing many interesting facts concerning the year's business of the organization. The address of Dr. Mees, Capital university's president, was a pleasing highlight of the evening, and I am sure the near-100 who heard him gained a better outlook toward what is necessary to guarantee the success of a community. His fable concerning the French wine celebration contained merit. The story should be an object lesson to those willing to benefit from the efforts of others, but unwilling to do a little work on their own part to make our community a better place in which to live. I congratulate the board of directors and hope that the men chosen to lead the organization through 1938 will lend their every effort to make the Chamber of Commerce a closely-knit unit that will lead the way toward improved business conditions in our own community. The Chamber of Commerce should carry the banner for our city, and I am sure the men in whom the organization has placed its trust will do all they can to assure the success of 1938. Remember, gentlemen, a person, regardless of what his fraternal, social or civic affiliations are, can not receive benefits from any project to which he has not added all his talents and full energy.

TO CITY COUNCIL

OFFICIALS: You have under consideration an ordinance to control the operation of and to register bicycles oned in Circleville. Taking for granted that bicycles should be regulated not only for the welfare of their riders, but for the safety of the general public, I urge you to study carefully every provision of the ordinance before you pass it. Will the legislation be enforced in a manner that will assure its 100 percent observance? Will penalties for law violation be enforced? Will it reduce the number of accidents involving vehicle riders? I believe that the number of mishaps involving "bikes" will be reduced, but just how the city with its limited police force can expect to enforce a bicycle regulatory ordinance is far beyond yours truly. There are not enough men on the day force at the present time to enforce parking regulations; how would the one officer and chief of police check up on the hundreds of bicycles that travel through the main thoroughfares hour after hour? Cyclists should be forced to observe traffic lights, and I have noticed that many

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

Something more than a decade ago Washington was agog with plans to insure world peace by limiting international armaments.

Today congress is completely absorbed in consideration of the biggest army and navy program (particularly a naval program) in America's peace-time history, with a view to preserving peace by the UN-limited armament method.

Back in the earlier era, of the 1920's Congressman Fred Britten of Chicago was chairman of the representatives' naval affairs committee. Congressman Britten had a reputation as quite a bellicose individual. Nevertheless, he was for armament limitation or outright DIS-armament. His argument was that countries will fight, if they have the equipment to fight with.

At the same juncture, Congressman George Huddleston of Birmingham (Ala.), a mighty good pacifist, could not see much point in disarmament or armament limitation, as a peace policy. His reasoning was that, if countries are quarrelsome, they can fight with as primitive weapons as carving knives; that the all-around lack of up-to-date mutual murder machinery cannot stop them. He favored disarmament, as sound economics, but not as a peace guarantee. To keep folk peaceful, he insisted, they must be educated to FEEL peaceful.

WHICH WAS CORRECT? Congressmen Britten and Huddleston both are out of office now, but I often think of their contrasting attitudes.

Which one had the better of the discussion?—as developments indicate?

We have had semi-disarmament, as per Congressman Britten's prescription, and the situation is worse than ever since the World War ended.

We have tried to preach international peace, as advocated by Congressman Huddleston, and that, neither seem to have worked, either.

DEAD!

Under the international bargain with the then Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes presiding, the nations hit on the 5-5-3 treaty (equal 5-5 navies for the United States and Britain; a 3 navy for Japan; 2.5 and 2.5 ratios each for France and Italy.)

John Bull immediately proceeded to flim-flam Uncle Sam on a lot of technicalities concerning caliber of guns and trajectories.

Japan never pretended to stick to the dicker. Italy ignored it altogether. So more are watching for the flash of the red than did a few months ago. A few accidents have proved expensive object lessons. A licensing system would help the city treasury, but, again, the city will have to make provision for employment of necessary persons to operate the bureau. When you decide to regulate bicycles you are taking a burden on your shoulders, gentlemen, so please do your best to assure approval of an ordinance that will carry teeth and, at the same time, be simple enough to assure enforcement.

TO BASKETBALL FANS

COUNTIANS: Another county basketball season is almost ended with the tournament being only three weeks away. Who will win the league championships and who will go through the tournament are outstanding questions in the minds of athletic followers at the present time. There are many good teams in the county this year, any one of which is capable of taking the title at stake. At this time of the year comes the question of what to do with the hundreds of persons, including parents of athletes, pupils of the various competing schools, townspeople and others who wish to see the games. Annually hundreds are turned away because there are no seating facilities for them. It has been suggested many times that the county school system erect a fieldhouse in a centrally-located part of the county, and I believe this idea bears much merit. Surely some provision could be made to better accommodate the county's sports followers.

TO FARM BUREAU

MEMBERS: It is pleasing to The Circuiteer to observe the business increases reported by your affiliates during the year just past. When farm business is good in Pickaway county then all business is good. After all, all residents of Circleville, and all residents of Ashville, Williamsport, New Holland, and all other centers in the county are farmers directly or indirectly, because do not all of us depend on the farm and its products for our livelihood? Where could Circleville's canning factories, dairies, mills and elevators be without products from the agricultural lands. Volume of business handled by the farm bureau and its associates totalled far more than $2,000,000, a gain of eight percent over 1936. This increase can be credited to efficient management, good organization, and splendid individual effort on the part of the members of the association.

TO RURAL RESIDENTS

FRIENDS: The new traveling library has completed its first week of service to Pickaway countians. Library workers are pleased with the reception given in the various communities and schools. The traveling library was a dream of library officials for many years. They wanted to extend book service to every section of the county to give the rural folk the opportunity of obtaining the same reading material as provided to residents of Circleville. That hope has been realized. Your traveling library promises to be one of the most outstanding county projects ever undertaken. You will be amazed by the vast number of books and other reading material available in the truck. Watch for the date the truck will visit your community. An inspection of the library will be a treat.

A CASE FOR 3 DETECTIVES

By LEO BRUCE
COPYRIGHT BY LEO BRUCE, RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Three famous detectives, Lord Simon, M. Picon, and Monsignor Smith, are investigating the murder of Mrs. Mary Thurston, middle-aged wife of a retired English physician, found slain in bed during a week-end party at the Thurston home near London. Those in the house when Mrs. Thurston retired were her husband, Townsend, the author, Strickland, a sportsman, and the servants. Mr. Rider, the vicar, had been preceded by the discovery of the tragedy. Mrs. Thurston's bedroom door was bolted from the inside and the only window, from which had been tossed the murder weapon, a Chinese knife from the Thurston hallway, was 20 feet from the ground. Sergeant Beef, the local constable, also ironed on the scene. Preliminary investigation revealed Mrs. Thurston had a stepson by a first marriage who had a bad name and who had not been heard of for years; also that her bank account suggested she may have been a blackmail victim. The detectives are questioning the Thurston cook.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 19

LORD SIMON continued to question the cook.

"Oh, you could hear Mrs. Thurston go to bed from the kitchen, could you?"

"Not... the door had been shut you couldn't. But Enid would keep it ajar last night," suggested Miss Storey.

"Did she appear to be listening for something?"

"She and the chauffeur yes. Once I got up and put the door to, because of the draught. But she soon had it open again."

"How did you account for that?"

"Oh, it was nothing very unusual. She always used to go up when Mrs. Thurston did. She was fond of her mistress, I will say that for her, and used to follow her up to see if she wanted anything."

"We know that that was at 11 o'clock. How long did Fellowes stay with you?"

"Not more than a minute or so, because I remember him looking up at the clock and remarking on it."

"On the clock?"

"No. On the time. 'Hullo,' he said, 'it's past 11.' And he got up and went upstairs."

"Did you look up at the clock?"

"I can't say I did. But I know it wasn't many seconds after Enid had gone."

"At any rate, you saw neither of them again until after the screams?"

"No."

"Which did you see first?"

"Enid. She came rushing in to say they were breaking down the misss' door."

"That would be within two minutes of the scream?"

"Yes."

"What had you done in the meantime?"

"Me? I was froze to the spot for a minute. Well, all alone in this old kitchen, which is creepy enough at the best of times, and then to hear someone hollering out like that! I'm not one to be frightened, but I ask you. When I'd pulled myself together, I heard the gentlemen running upstairs, and as soon as I'd got the door open I saw Enid come tearing down with her eyes popping out of her head."

"Then?"

"Well, then, some time later, down comes Mr. Stall, looking like a ghost in his dressing gown. And then Fellowes comes running down and says he's sent for the doctor and the police. I heard him start the car and drive off. For about 10 minutes, I should say, Enid sits there silent. Then all of a sudden she goes into hysterics, and Mr. Stall runs out of the room saying he was after brandy. He comes back for a minute, we gets Enid a bit calm, then he goes away again, to see to things as he called it."

"Good. You've got it all admirably clear. You saw no one else that evening? None of the guests?"

"No."

"I'm afraid I've been very inquisitive. But I can't think of any more questions to ask you."

Suddenly M. Picon turned round from the fireplace. "A little moment if you please, mam'selle," he said. "You will tell Papa Picon what you call 'a thing or two', no?"

Miss Storey seemed to wonder for a moment whether this was the sort of opening favored by old gentlemen on a train, or a genuine request for information, so she remained noncommittally silent.

"The young man, the chauffeur. He called your attention to the clock perhaps?"

"Not exactly that. He just said it was past 11, and that he must go."

"He did not say why or where?"

"No. But he had a rat trap with him."

"Ah yes. The trap for the little rat, n'est-ce pas? And where would he be taking that?"

"The apple room. I suppose Mrs. Thurston was always complaining she could hear them over her head."

"Always complaining, is it not, to Fellowes?"

"Yes."

"And tell 'im to place the trap, no?"

"I suppose so."

"And now the girl. Did she tell you perhaps where she was when the screams were heard?"

"Oh yes. She was in Dr. Thurston's room, turning back the bed."

"And the chauffeur, you saw him no more that night?"

"Not to speak to."

"I thank you. I thank you also, mam'selle, in anticipation, for the cold buffet," he added with characteristic courtesy.

"That's all, then?" asked Miss Storey.

Instinctively we turned to Mgr. Smith, but he was apparently asleep.

"Monsignor Smith?" Sam Williams called him.

"Oh yes. Dear me. I'm afraid I was dozing. I was going to ask you about a bell. The front door bell. Did you hear it last night, Miss Storey?"

"When?"

"When the girl had hysterics?"

"Can't say I did. But then—I might easily not have even if it had rung a dozen times. She was in convulsions, as you might say, and no time for listening to bells."

Mgr. Smith resumed his sleepy posture, and Miss Storey left us.

"I can certainly believe in that lady's cookin'," commented Lord Simon; "accuracy and discretion seems to be her strong suits."

"She is no lover of romance, your Mademoiselle Storey," admitted M. Picon. "I wonder whether perhaps she and cause to dislike romance—a certain special romance. Voyons. We shall see as the time continues."

I could not resist a query to Mgr. Smith. "You were thinking...?" I said.

"I was thinking about bells."

"Campanology, perhaps?"

"No, electric bells. Marriage bells, maybe. Or even... his voice sank, "even muffled bells."

Whereas I, just then, was troubled with many new doubts. Why did Miss Storey dislike the rest of the staff? Of what did she disapprove? Why had Fellowes called her attention to the time when he left her? And was it a coincidence that at the moment of the screams, Enid, Fellowes, Stall, Strickland and Norris had all been, presumably, upstairs, while Miss Storey herself had been alone in the kitchen with no one to establish her alibi, and Mr. Miles, that new and rather sinister person, had been enjoying, somewhere in the district, his "evening off"?

"Stall, the butler, was the next person questioned. Stall came in deferentially and seemed embarrassed when he was told that he might sit down. He had no sooner done so than Sergeant Beef rounded on him with deplorable crudeness."

"Ere," he almost shouted, "ave you been blackmailing Mrs. Thurston?"

Stall stirred uneasily. Surely even Beef could have expected only one answer to the question. "Certainly not," was all that the man wisely said.

"Well, it looks very much like it," went on the insuppressible Beef. "Very much like it. She's been drawing out big sums in small notes, and I don't know who else could 'ave been on 'er if it wasn't you. Why don't you own up, now?"

Such crass methods evidently helped Stall to reassure himself. His composure returned, and he faced the sergeant. "I don't think I need answer such a question," he said. "It's ridiculous."

"Oh no, it's not," Beef went on, while I could see that the three investigators, whose delicate wits were outraged by all this, had become impatient. "Oh no, it's not. You're one of the 'ypocritical sort, Mr. Stall. Sing in the choir, you do, instead of coming down to the local. I'm more than arf convinced that you've been up to something in the blackmailing line. Out with it now, what 'ave you done with that two 'undred quid you 'ad off of Mrs. Thurston?"

"If you've quite finished, Beef," sighed Lord Simon.

"Oright, you 'ave a go at 'im. You'll see if I wasn't right."

There was evident relief when the sergeant returned to his notebook, and Lord Simon, leaning back in his chair, began a more tactful sort of cross-examination. "Of course you know of Mrs. Thurston's will, Stall?"

"Oh yes, my lord."

"And what did you think about it?"

"Very gratifying, my lord, that Mrs. Thurston should have considered us in that way. But not a matter to be taken very seriously."

"And the other servants?"

"Very similar ideas, my lord. If I may say so, domestic servants today are more highly educated than in former times, and not likely to be deceived by anything quite so ingenious."

"Really. Yet ingenious or not, the badly thing was there, wasn't it?"

Stall shrugged. "I had scarcely troubled to consider it," he said. "I see. Were you and Fellowes friendly?" You know, pals, pals, jolly old pals, if you'll excuse my low-brow idioms.

"Your lordship can afford to use slang. No, we were in no sense friends. It could hardly be expected that in my position I should fraternize with a young fellow of that type."

"What type?"

"The chauffeur has been to sea, my lord, if not worse. He is a very blunt-spoken young man, whose history has not been altogether reputable, I believe."

"Whereas your own?"

"My references go back over many years, my lord, and I believe are unimpeachable."

"It must have taken you those many years to cultivate your manner, Stall. It is the most perfect thing of its kind I've ever come upon."

"Thank you, my lord."

"Was there anything else you didn't like about Fellowes?"

"I disapproved of his familiarity with the parlor-maid."

What Type Spring, Mattress Do You Use?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

SPEAKING OF whether it is advisable to sleep on the sleeping porch these winter nights or not, as we did yesterday, calls to mind

a notice we saw recently that the United States patent office has just granted a patent to Michael Batiek of Cold Spring, N. Y., for an air-conditioned bed. A pipe full of small holes goes across the bottom of the bed on the same level with the sleeper.

Through the pipe is pumped air which blows directly on 'he sleeper. This mechanical breather is presumed to condition the air for the sleeper. I have no doubt the reading of this paragraph will cause a great many to have cold chills go up and down their spines.

The kind of bed that is healthiest, whether hard or soft, etc., is, like the question of the sleeping porch, a matter of choice. Most people, I believe, sleep better on a hard mattress. Although it is a general principle that for best rest the sleeper requires hardness, or resistance, where the weight and contours of the body need it most, on the contrary he requires softness and resiliency where the body pressures on the mattress are the least.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The principle of any inner spring mattresses at present, assumes that the head, the feet and the mid-section weigh substantially the same because the same counter pressure is provided throughout, which principle, says Dr. Norman D. Mattison, may in time be considered more old-fashioned than are hair mattresses today.

Comments Coil Spring

Of the types of bed springs Dr. Donald Laird, of Colgate university, believes that the woven wire type or fabric type should not be used by anyone who weighs more than 40 pounds. He goes even farther to say that after one's first birthday, one should sleep on no spring but the coil type. The woven wire type does not conform to the body surface and quickly develops a permanent sag, a sag which cannot be removed by tautening at house cleaning time the way grandfather tautened the old rope bed. The coil type of bed spring has been proved to be the most comfortable.

Extensive experiments have been made in several psychological laboratories on the effects of sleep. Sound sleepers have been tested on all the different kinds of mattresses and springs, and the relatively hard mattress with the coil type of spring gives longer sleep and sounder sleep than any other type.

Inasmuch as we turn from side to back, to side, on an average of every 12 inutes during the night, the width of the bed is just as important as any other feature of it.

You're Telling Me!

ONE GREAT mystery the average radio listener would like cleared up at once is what it is at which the studio audiences are always laughing.

Walt Disney, we read, is the envy of other movie producers. No wonder, his stars never get temperamental.

Those bandits who looted a drug store of more than $100 worth of aspirin tablets might have been a bit less greedy. They could have left a couple for the store owner who undoubtedly needs them.

A school is to be built opposite Yankee stadium. That's one institution where staying after hours will be popular with the kids.

One thing Japan has learned so far in her invasion of China is that the so-called Chinese dogs-of-war aren't gentle Pekingese—they're snarling, red-eyed Chow!

With France, England and Russian representatives doing all the talking Zadok Dumbkopf wants the name changed to the League of Three Nations.

An Italian correspondent, writing for a medical journal, declares Italy has improved the health of Ethiopians. Those Ethiopians, he undoubtedly means, who weren't shot during the invasion and since.

The cool, dark shoe, either of fabric or mesh, is to retain its popularity this year. For wear with dark town costumes, it is shown in navy, black, dark brown and dark red.

TO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

GENTLEMEN: Your organization is to be congratulated for the splendid annual meeting that was conducted this week. The meeting was a success from start to finish with the report of the secretary disclosing many interesting facts concerning the year's business of the organization. The address of Dr. Mees, Capital University's president, was a pleasing highlight of the evening, and I am sure the near-100 who heard him gained a better outlook toward what is necessary to guarantee the success of a community. His fable concerning the French wine celebration contained merit. The story should be an object lesson to those willing to benefit from the efforts of others, but unwilling to do a little work on their own part to make our a community a better place in which to live. I congratulate the board of directors and hope that the men chosen to lead the organization through 1938 will lend their every effort to make the Chamber of Commerce a closely-knit unit that will lead the way toward improved business conditions in our own community. The Chamber of Commerce should carry the banner for our city, and I am sure the men in whom the organization has placed its trust will do all they can to assure the success of 1938. Remember, gentlemen, a person, regardless of what his fraternal, social or civic affiliations are, can not receive benefits from any project to which he has not added all his talents and full energy.

TO CITY COUNCIL

OFFICIALS: You have under consideration an ordinance to control the operation of and to register bicycles oned in Circleville. Taking for granted that bicycles should be regulated not only for the welfare of their riders, but for the safety of the general public, I urge you to study carefully every provision of the ordinance before you pass it. Will the legislation be enforced in a manner that will assure its 100 percent observance? Will penalties for law violation be enforced? Will it reduce the number of accidents involving vehicle riders? I believe that the number of mishaps involving "bikes" will be reduced, but just how the city with its limited police force can expect to enforce a bicycle regulatory ordinance is far beyond yours truly. There are not enough men on the day force at the present time to enforce parking regulations; how would the one officer and chief of police check up on the hundreds of bicycles that travel through the main thoroughfares hour after hour? Cyclists should be forced to observe traffic lights, and I have noticed that many

TO BASKETBALL FANS

COUNTIANS: Another county basketball season is almost ended with the tournament being only three weeks away. Who will win the league championships and who will go through the tournament are outstanding questions in the minds of athletic followers at the present time. There are many good teams in the county this year, any one of which is capable of taking the title at stake. At this time of the year comes the question of what to do with the hundreds of persons, including parents of athletes, pupils of the various competing schools, townspeople and others who wish to see the games. Annually hundreds are turned away because there are no seating facilities for them. It has been suggested many times that the county school system erect a fieldhouse in a centrally-located part of the county, and I believe this idea bears much merit. Surely some provision could be made to better accommodate the county's sports followers.

TO FARM BUREAU

MEMBERS: It is pleasing to The Circuiteer to observe the business increases reported by your affiliates during the year just past. When farm business is good in Pickaway county then all business is good. After all, all residents of Circleville, and all residents of Ashville, Williamsport, New Holland, and all other centers in the county are farmers directly or indirectly, because do not all of us depend on the farm and its products for our livelihood? Where could Circleville's canning factories, dairies, mills and elevators be without products from the agricultural lands. Volume of business handled by the farm bureau and its associates totalled far more than $2,000,000, a gain of eight percent over 1936. This increase can be credited to efficient management, good organization, and splendid individual effort on the part of the members of the association.

TO RURAL RESIDENTS

FRIENDS: The new traveling library has completed its first week of service to Pickaway countians. Library workers are pleased with the reception given in the various communities and schools. The traveling library was a dream of library officials for many years. They wanted to extend book service to every section of the county to give the rural folk the opportunity of obtaining the same reading material as provided to residents of Circleville. That hope has been realized. Your traveling library promises to be one of the most outstanding county projects ever undertaken. You will be amazed by the vast number of books and other reading material available in the truck. Watch for the date the truck will visit your community. An inspection of the library will be a treat.

A CASE FOR 3 DETECTIVES

LEO BRUCE

READ THIS FIRST:

Three famous detectives, Lord Simon, M. Picon, and Monsignor Smith, are investigating the murder of Mrs. Mary Thurston, middle-aged wife of a retired English physician, found slain in bed during a week-end party at the Thurston home near London. Those in the house when Mrs. Thurston retired were her husband, Townsend, the author, Williams, the family lawyer, Strickland, a sportsman, and the servant, Mr. Rider, the vicar, had been a dinner guest. Three piercing screams preceded the discovery of the tragedy. Mrs. Thurston's bedroom door was bolted from the inside and the only open window, from which had been tossed the murder weapon, a Chinese knife from the Thurston hallway, was 20 feet from the ground. Sergeant Beef, the local constable, also in on the scene. Preliminary investigation revealed Mrs. Thurston had a stepson by a first marriage who had a bad name and who had not been heard of for years; also that her bank account suggested she may have been a blackmailer. The detectives are questioning the Thurston cook.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 19

LORD SIMON continued to question the cook.

"Oh, you could hear Mrs. Thurston go to bed from the kitchen, could you?"

"Not . . . the door had been shut you couldn't. But Enid would keep it ajar last night," suggested Miss Storey.

"Did she appear to be listening for something?"

"She and the chauffeur yes. Once I got up and put the door to, because of the draught. But she soon had it open again."

"How did you account for that?"

"Oh, it was nothing very unusual. She always used to go up when Mrs. Thurston did. She was fond of her mistress. I will say that for her, and used to follow her up to see if she wanted anything."

"We know that that was at 11 o'clock. How long did Fellowes stay with you?"

"Not more than a minute or so, because I remember him looking up at the clock and remarking on it."

"On the clock?"

"No. On the time. 'Hullo,' he said, 'it's past 11.' And he got up and went upstairs."

"Did you look up at the clock?"

"I can't say I did. But I know it wasn't many seconds after Enid had gone."

"At any rate, you saw neither of them again until after the screams?"

"No."

"Which did you see first?"

"Enid. She came rushing in to say they were breaking down the missus' door."

"That would be within two minutes of the scream?"

"What had you done in the meantime?"

"Me? I was froze to the spot for a minute. Well, all alone in this old kitchen, which is creepy enough at the best of times, and then to hear someone hollering out like that. I'm not one to be frightened, but I ask you. When I'd pulled myself together, I heard the gentlemen running upstairs, and as soon as I'd got the door open I saw Enid come tearing down with her eyes popping out of her head."

"Then?"

"Well, then, some time later, down comes Mr. Stall, looking like a ghost in his dressing gown. And then Fellowes comes running down and says he's sent for the doctor and the police. I heard him start the car and drive off. For about 10 minutes, I should say, Enid sits there silent. Then all of a sudden she goes into hysterics, and Mr. Stall runs out of the room saying 'e was after brandy. He comes back for a minute, we gets Enid a bit calm, then he goes away again, to see to things as he called it."

"Good. You've got it all admirably clear. You saw no one else that evening? None of the guests?"

"No."

"I'm afraid I've been very inquisitive. But I can't think of any more questions to ask you."

Suddenly M. Picon turned round from the fireplace. "A little moment if you please, mam'selle," he said. "You will tell Papa Picon what you call 'a thing or two', no?"

Miss Storey seemed to wonder for a moment whether this was the sort of opening favored by old gentlemen on a train, or a genuine request for information, so she remained noncommittally silent.

"The young man, the chauffeur. He called your attention to the clock perhaps?"

"Not exactly that. He just said it was past 11, and that he must go."

"He did not say why or where?"

"No. But he had a rat trap with him."

"Ah yes. The trap for the little rat, nest-ce pas? And where would he be taking that?"

"The apple room. I suppose Mrs. Thurston was always complaining she could hear them over her head."

"Always complaining, is it not, to Fellowes?"

"Yes."

"And tell 'im to place the trap, no?"

"I suppose so."

"Oh yes. She was in Dr. Thurston's room, turning back the bed."

"And the chauffeur, you saw him no more that night?"

"Not to speak to."

"I thank you. I thank you also, mam'selle, in anticipation, for the cold buffet," he added with characteristic courtesy.

"That's all, then?" asked Miss Storey.

Instinctively we turned to Mgr. Smith, but he was apparently asleep.

"Monsignor Smith . . . Sam Williams called him."

"Oh yes. Dear me. I was afraid I was dozing. I was going to ask you about a bell. The front door bell. Did you hear it last night, Miss Storey?"

"When?"

"When the girl had hysterics?"

"Can't say I did. But then—I might easily not have, even if it had rung a dozen times. She was in convulsions, as you might say. I had no time for listening to bells."

Mgr. Smith resumed his sleepy posture, and Miss Storey left us.

"I can certainly believe in that lady's cooking," commented Lord Simon, "accuracy and discretion seems to be her strong suits."

"She is no lover of romance, your Mademoiselle Storey," admitted M. Picon. "I wonder whether perhaps she had cause to dislike romance—a certain special romance. Voyons. We shall see as the time continues."

I could not resist a query to Mgr. Smith. "You were thinking . . .?" I said.

"I was thinking about bells," "Campanology, perhaps?"

"No, electric bells. Marriage bells, maybe. Or even . . . his voice sank, "even muffled bells."

Whereas I, just then, was troubled with many new doubts. Why did Miss Storey dislike the rest of the staff? Of what did she disapprove? Why had Fellowes called her attention to the time when he left her? And was it a coincidence that at the moment of the screams, Enid, Fellowes, Stall, Strickland and Norris had all been, presumably, upstairs, while Miss Storey herself had been alone in the kitchen with no one to establish her alibi, and Mr. Miles, that 'new and rather sinister person, had been enjoying, somewhere in the district, his "evening off"?

Stall, the butler, was the next person questioned. Stall came in deferentially and seemed embarrassed when he was told that he might sit down. He had no sooner done so than Sergeant Beef rounded on him with deplorable crudeness.

"Ere," he almost shouted, "ave you been blackmailing Mrs. Thurston?"

Stall stirred uneasily. Surely even Beef could have expected only one answer to the question. "Certainly not," was all that the man wisely said.

"Well, it looks very much like it," went on the insuppressible Beef. "Very much like it. She's been drawing out big sums in small notes, and I don't know who else could 'ave been on 'er if it wasn't you. Why don't you own up now?"

"Such crass methods evidently helped Stall to reassure himself. His composure returned and he faced the sergeant. "I don't think I need answer such a question," he said. "It's ridiculous."

"Oh no, it's not," Beef went on, while I could see that the three investigators, whose delicate wits were outraged by all this, had become impatient. "Oh no, it's not."

You're one of the 'ypocritical sort, Mr. Stall. Sing in the choir, you do, instead of coming down to the local. I'm more than arf convinced that you've been up to something in the blackmailing line. Out with it now, what 'ave you done with that two 'undred quid you 'ad off of Mrs. Thurston?"

"If you've quite finished, Beef," sighed Lord Simon.

"Oright, you 'ave a go at 'im. You'll see if I wasn't right."

There was evident relief when the sergeant returned, to his notebook, and Lord Simon, leaning back in his chair, began a more tactful sort of cross-examination.

"Of course you knew of Mrs. Thurston's will, Stall?"

"Oh yes, my lord."

"And what did you think about it?"

"Very gratifying, my lord, that Mrs. Thurston should have considered us in that way. But not a matter to be taken very seriously."

"And the other servants?"

"Very similar ideas, my lord. If I may say so, domestic servants today are more highly educated than in former times, and not likely to be deceived by anything quite so ingenious."

"Really. Yet ingenious or not, the badly thing was there, wasn't it?"

Stall shrugged. "I had scarcely troubled to consider it," he said.

"I see. Were you and Fellowes friendly?" You know, pals, pals, jolly old pals, if you'll excuse my low-brow idiom?"

"Your lordship can afford to use slang. No, we were in no sense friends. It could hardly be expected that in my position I should fraternize with a young fellow of that type."

"What type?"

"The chauffeur has been to sea, my lord, if not worse. He is a very blunt-spoken young man, whose history has not been altogether reputable, I believe."

"Whereas your own?"

"My references go back over many years, my lord, and I believe are unimpeachable."

"It must have taken you those many years to cultivate your manner, Stall. It is the most perfect thing of its kind I've ever come upon."

"Thank you, my lord."

"Was there anything else you didn't like about Fellowes?"

"I disapproved of his familiarity with the parlor-maid."

What Type Spring, Mattress Do You Use?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

SPEAKING OF whether it is advisable to sleep on the sleeping porch these winter nights or not, as we did yesterday, calls to mind

a notice we saw recently that the United States patent office has just granted a patent to Michael Batick of Cold Spring, N. Y., for an air-conditioned bed. A pipe full of small holes goes across the bottom of the bed on the same level with the sleeper.

Through the pipe is pumped air which blows directly on 'he sleeper. This mechanical breather is presumed to condition the air for the sleeper. I have no doubt the reading of this paragraph will cause a great many to have cold chills go up and down their spines.

The kind of bed that is healthiest, whether hard or soft, etc., is, like the question of the sleeping porch, a matter of choice. Most people, I believe, sleep better on a hard mattress. Although it is a general principle that for best rest the sleeper requires hardness, or resistance, where the weight and contours of the body need it most, on the contrary he requires softness and resiliency where the body pressures on the mattress are the least.

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The principle of any inner spring mattresses at present, assumes that the head, the feet and the mid-section weigh substantially the same because the same counter pressure is provided throughout, which principle, says Dr. Norman D. Mattison, may in time be considered more old-fashioned than are hair mattresses today.

Comments Coil Spring

Of the types of bed springs Dr. Donald Laird, of Colgate university, believes that the woven wire type or fabric type should not be used by anyone who weighs more than 40 pounds. He goes even farther to say that after one's first birthday, one should sleep on no spring but the coil type. The woven wire type does not conform to the body surface and quickly develops a permanent sag, a sag which cannot be removed by tautening at house cleaning time the way wandfather tautened the old rope bed. The coil type of bed spring has been proved to be the most comfortable.

Extensive experiments have been made in several psychological laboratories on the effects of sleep. Sound sleepers have been tested on all the different kinds of mattresses and springs, and the relatively hard mattress with the coil type of spring gives longer sleep and sounder sleep than any other type.

Inasmuch as we turn from side to back, to side, on an average of every 12 inutes during the night, the width of the bed is just as important as any other feature of it.

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

Something more than a decade ago Washington was agog with plans to insure world peace by limiting international armaments.

Today congress is completely absorbed in consideration of the biggest army and navy program (particularly a naval program) in America's peace-time history, with a view to preserving peace by the UN-limited armament method.

Back in the earlier era, of the 1920's Congressman Fred Britten of Chicago was chairman of the representatives' naval affairs committee. Congressman Britten had a reputation as quite a bellicose individual. Nevertheless, he was for armament limitation or outright DIS-armament. His argument was that countries will fight, if they have the equipment to fight with.

At the same juncture, Congressman George Huddleston of Birmingham (Ala.), a mighty good pacifist, could not see much point in disarmament or armament limitation, as a peace policy. His reasoning was that, if countries are quarrelsome, they can fight with as primitive weapons as carving knives; that the all-around lack of up-to-date mutual murder machinery cannot stop them. He favored disarmament, as sound economics, but not as a peace guarantee. To keep folk peaceful, he insisted,

they must be educated to FEEL peaceful.

WHICH WAS CORRECT?

Congressmen Britten and Huddleston both are out of office now, but I often think of their contrasting attitudes.

Which one had the better of the discussion?—as developments indicate?

We have had semi-disarmament, as per Congressman Britten's prescription, and the situation is worse than ever since the World War ended.

We have tried to preach international peace, as advocated by Congressman Huddleston, and that doesn't seem to have worked, either.

DEAD!

Under the international bargain with the then Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes presiding, the nations hit on the 5-5-3 treaty (equal 5-5 navies for the United States and Britain; a 3 navy for Japan; 2.5 and 2.5 ratios each for France and Italy.)

John Bull immediately proceeded to flim-flam Uncle Sam on a lot of technicalities concerning caliber of guns and trajectories.

According to Miss Jeanne Howell, Gallipolis senior, chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements, the ration of boys to girls is 4-1; so this week and next the boys will be watching their "p's" and "q's".

HULL DIRECTS VICTORY DRIVE FOR STATE '5'

Rinta Of Bobcats Proves
Finest Cager On Big
Coliseum Floor

COLUMBUS, Feb. 4—(UP)—

Ohio State's record of never having lost a basketball game to its down-state rival, Ohio university, was still intact today.

The Bucks took a 47 to 40 victory from Ohio university last night. It was Ohio State's sixth straight triumph over the Bobcats in a series that dates back to 1903.

The poise that even a mediocre team such as Ohio State has this season acquires in playing in the tough Western conference was the principal factor in the Bucks' victory last night.

Ohio U. had a bad case of "buck fever" during the early minutes of the encounter and with seven minutes of the battle gone were behind 8 to 2.

At this point the Bobcats became organized and began to whitle down the margin. But with six minutes of the period left they tied the count at 10 to 10 and then began to forge steadily ahead.

With the sterling Gene Rinta pacing the attack the Bobcats pulled into a 23 to 14 advantage by half-time.

At the start of the second period
Ohio State switched its defensive tactics and began to "pick up"
the Bobcats all over the floor.
Rushed in the back court Ohio U. became jittery and literally tossed the game away.

With the veteran Jimmy Hull, hitting the basket from all angles,
Ohio State pulled to within a point of Ohio U. at 27 to 26 after 10 minutes of the half were gone.
That was beginning of the end.
Hull hit another long one to put Ohio State back in front and the Bucks easily dominated the remainder of the game.

Ohio State deserved the victory because the Bucks were better able to adapt themselves to tight situations. The only unjust thing to the outcome was that it fell Rinta's lot to be on the losing quintet.

The Fairport Harbor lad was easily the outstanding individual on the court. That the Bobcats did not win was no fault of his. Rinta played the pivot in masterful fashion and proved one of the best ball handlers to show here in several seasons. He took his team's high point honors with 12 markers.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

GET OUT OF THE WAY

WHEN YOUR partner has set up his suit against a No Trump contract, your job is usually to use every possible artifice to get him into the lead so he may run his remaining cards. When other suits are played by the declarer, you should toss off any high cards you possess which may thus leave your partner's lower ones in ranking position as entries.

Hand:

♥ A K Q 9
♦ 7 5
♣ A Q 10 7

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

In a three-table duplicate match the bidding and play varied considerably on this deal. At one table the contract ended in 4-Hearts and at the other two it was played at 3-No Trumps.

Against the No Trump contracts, the spade K was led and the suit continued until the third round, when South won with the A. The diamond 7 was then led and won in the dummy with the K.

At one table, East discarded the diamond 2 on this play, and when the A was cashed, played the J, but won the third round with the Q. He then returned a club, with the hope of getting West in to cash his remaining spades, but South refused the chance to finesse. The heart 10 furnished an entry for the remaining diamonds, so that he was sure of his nine tricks.

At the other table, East decided to make every effort to get his partner in the lead, so when the diamond was led to the K, he tossed the diamond Q. On the A, he tossed the J, so that it was West and not East who captured the third diamond lead. With this play South had no chance to make his contract.

How should South play to make his contract of 7-No Trumps after the lead of the diamond J?

Keep plenty of cleansing tissues in the bathroom. Men can use it in wiping their razors, and women for removing lipstick. It saves the towels.

Why not cut marshmallows in the shape of hearts and decorate a cake for St. Valentine's Day?

Von Blomberg as war minister. They merely said: "Nothing is known of the confiscations."

The feeling among well informed persons today was that the likelihood was increasing that Col.-Gen. Wilhelm Goering, air minister and four-year director, might assume a position of considerable power in the army even if he did not become war minister.

There were rumors of many sorts, and of wild improbability, as to the situation here. Informed sources still insisted that the repercussions to Baron Von Blomberg's prospective retirement were of limited scope, however. It was reported that Fuehrer Adolf Hitler still had not decided on Blomberg's successor.

The possibility was mentioned that there might be no new war minister for the present but that the army, navy and air forces might be administered under their respective commanders in chief. Blomberg, as war minister, was commander in chief of the combined fighting services.

Hitler conferred with Army and Nazi party men today, apparently still seeking to solve the war ministry situation. Well informed sources expressed belief that a decision would be made and a clarifying communique issued soon, probably before Sunday.

V. F. W. DAY SET

COLUMBUS, Feb. 4.—(UP)—Governor Davey today designated the week of Feb. 20 as "Veterans of Foreign Wars Week" in Ohio in preparation for the national encampment to be held here next Summer.

TWO ARMY MEN HURT AS PLANE FALLS IN FIELD

DAYTON, Feb. 4.—(UP)—Capt. E. H. White and Lieut. Paul Shanahan, cut and bruised, were in "fairly good" condition in a hospital today while Wright field officials investigated the cause of the crash of a Lockheed Electra plane just outside the field.

They were making a test flight of a plane, similar to those grounded on a commercial line recently. In a forced landing, the plane struck a ditch, tearing off one motor and damaging the landing gear and nose.

BUSINESSMEN REPORT TO F. D.

been thrown out of the business conference.

"One little man down and 10 to go..."

But political Washington measured the conference in terms of reaction to current New Deal policies. Generally was accepted here that the conferees were neither hand-picked nor steered by administration advisers toward the conclusions suggested in resolutions adopted in yesterday's final meeting. These resolutions will be the basis of the report to be submitted to Mr. Roosevelt by General Chairman Fred Roth, of Cleveland, Ohio, and the chairman of the 10 committees which drafted them for submission to the conference as a whole.

The conference agreed, in general terms, with several fundamentals of New Deal policy. The small businessmen recommended energetic trust busting, but preferred to proceed with large enforcement appropriations under existing law rather than to seek new legislation. They called in a variety of ways for further restrictions on chain store operations. One chain store resolution would almost destroy inter-state operation by requiring that all profits be retained within the state in which they were earned.

Mr. Roosevelt got general endorsement for his efforts to regularize installment buying, not only to increase down payment requirements but to prevent the "no down payment" type of sales campaign. The small businessmen would not limit installment buying reform to the automobile business, beyond which Mr. Roosevelt so far has not gone.

MR. BOWMAN HAS NO NEED FOR SODA MINTS OR MAGNESIA NOW

Railway Conductor suffered terribly from sourness, gas, pains, bloating and palpitation which upset his nerves, made him dizzy. Says VENDOR only thing that relieved him.

MR. WILLIAM F. BOWMAN

Men and women all over this state are telling how the great Root, Herb and Alkaline medicine Vendol has given astonishing relief, oftentimes after other remedies did no good. This proves Vendol a medicine of real merit, one that can be relied upon by every member of the family.

Mr. William F. Bowman, a conductor on the Columbus, Ohio, street railway, says: "I got to where I had to take soda or magnesia after every meal because my food disagreed with me, caused sour stomach, acid risings, cramps, gas and palpitation. I seemed to have a lump in my throat and would blast up until my clothes felt tight. This condition 'got on my nerves' so I couldn't sleep and often felt dizzy and saw spots before my eyes."

"I tried several remedies without much success, then I tried Vendol and the little Vendol laxative tablets and got such wonderful relief that now I feel like a different person and never need soda or magnesia. Vendol is the best medicine I ever saw and I know it will help everyone suffering the same as I did."

If you suffer like this, get Vendol at your nearest druggist. Highly recommended here by
